

Dear Doctor,

I am giving you this letter today out of concern that recent changes made to the American healthcare system have gone far past providing insurance to the uninsured. I am worried the Affordable Care Act is actively undermining the patient/physician relationship. It seems that doctors now, more than ever, answer to someone other than the patient.

If you share my concern regarding the future of American medicine, I'd like to take a moment of your time to introduce you to a national physician organization, Physicians for Reform, that is leading the fight to return healthcare to patients and their doctors.

Physicians for Reform has worked with numerous national healthcare policy experts to write a patient-centered, free market alternative to the Affordable Care Act. They have presented it to key individuals in the U.S. Senate and have met with multiple presidential hopefuls.

You can learn more about this effort by visiting www.PhysiciansForReform.org. The one voice missing from the entire healthcare debate is the voice of the working physician. This is your chance to make your voice heard.

Please, for the sake of your patients and the future of American medicine, consider joining this effort.

Sincerely,
